The first race I remember being at Churchill Downs was the Kentucky Derby in 1974. The second race I remember going to at Churchill Downs was the Travers in 1979. So when my half-brother entered the Varsity Cup in England in 1996, the Churchill Downs was my choice of venue. I will be cheering as they come and I would like to take this opportunity to introduce to you a new book I have written on Churchill Downs, of all places! The author, Steven M. Smith is an experienced horse racing writer and has published numerous articles and books on the sport. He also has a blog: TwoShedsNine.com. His well-written articles are fairly objective, although he does favor Churchill Downs to Keeneland, his home track. There is more than a little history of Churchill Downs in this book. For one, there is a chapter about the Churchill Downs Stakes, which is named after the racetrack's founder, Colonel John Rowland. For another, there is a chapter about the famous steeplechase that was run there in 1937 and then reputed to be the first to run three legs of equal length. The chapter about that race will give you a history lesson about the 1930s, a period I generally prefer to ignore as I don't have much interest in it. This book is written in an easy-to-read style, but you could certainly find out more about the tracks and the famous race at the track if you want. There is a plethora of pictures of the famous racing yard, of Churchill Downs and of famous jockeys and other racing personalities. In the chapters about racing history, the book includes a chapter about the Fred Archer scandal, which included a bit about the best horse of the time, Nasty Habit. You can read more about that scandal in 1cb139a0ed
